MONTHLY PERSPECTIVE:

ATTACKS ON CHRISTIANS

With the attacks on Christians rising, where is the outrage from democrats, liberals or the Muslim world? Refuse to bake one gay wedding cake and the left goes nuts. Fuck them and all of their kind. Democrats and Muslims are all of the same breed, nasty self-serving poor excuses for humans.

DEMOCRATS

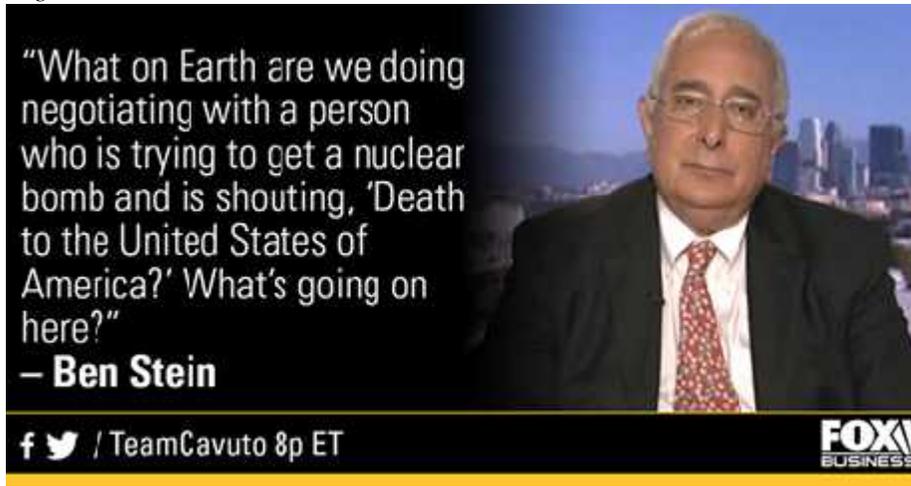

Democrats are protected by a country they fail to protect. It has been an ongoing strategy of liberals and democrats. During the second term of a democratic president, several things happen. Presidents know they are on the way out will push their ideology on the American people.

Next, they destroy and demoralize the military. Good soldiers and officer vote with their feet and get out. The military institution becomes weaker. Generals become more political. Soldiers pay the price on the ground with a lack of foreign policy and direction.

IRAN

Our State Department is a collection of appointed goof-balls that are trying to justify a non-existent foreign policy. We have a bunch of tadpoles trying to negotiate foreign policy with meat eaters. Be careful America when you vote next. Presidents have a way of bringing in all their loser friends and giving them jobs in the government and we the people suffer for it.

INTERNAL UNREST

Gays worry about non-existent persecution and don't have a clue about the real world. In the other real world, Iran is running amuck. Yet they snivel and cry about civil rights violations that are individual rights. I as an American have the right not to like you or your lifestyle and not to have it forced upon me or my family and beliefs. I am not anti-gay until you make it an issue and become militant or become too pushy. You are a minority and should remember it. In other countries you could be killed for being a homosexual. You are protected here. Now in America we pay for transgender operations with public funds. How ignorant can we get? All this drama over a cake.

MILITARY EXERCISES

I continually get asked about the military and their allegiance to our country. Our military is conservative and believes in the true America and not the liberal fantasy land projected by our current administration.

Generally our military hates liberals and their philosophies. During democratic terms in office, the president will avoid using the military at all cost and will use other covert means to fight wars. Special Operations forces will be used excessively because of their secrecy. This puts lives at risk due to operational tempos and work load.

As for the military practicing in the United States, it happens all the time. It happened before I was in the military in the 1980's. The military cannot go overseas into other countries and just practice. It does not happen.

The only way to replicate big cities problems such as navigation for pilots and soldiers is to practice here in the United States. The military will use its own internal role players. It is just how things are done.

They are not coming to get you. They need to continually train and practice for when they are called overseas to solve problems in larger cities. A case in point is Yemen. It is falling and things are getting done. They don't practice there as it is difficult to do rehearsals/practice while you are getting shot at. It is just not doable.

So, American service people practice where it is safe, in America. Their job is to stay prepared and protect us.

Some exercises are overt and announced. Some are low visibility in nature. They don't want a bunch of folks with cell phones recording their training and tactics.

Don't get excited. If they military were to turn against America, I would be the first to let you know. Be happy in the fact they are training. Training saves lives.

2nd AMENDMENT

Not to bash the NRA this month, but they need to get back on track. They started as a training organization and have left that mission somewhere along the road. While being a major political organization, they fail to cultivate new members and keep up with the current training issues and doctrine

The NRA has numerous internal departments and compete for money and power. Instead of focusing on new member development and training, they court the dollar. The same applies to their instructor program which probably numbers at over a hundred thousand members, but it is quantity program and not quality.

The NRA needs to revisit and realign their goals and mission.

First they need to raise the bar with instructors and training. Homework must accompanied by field work and proficiency. Just because you can read a manual does not mean you can teach. Currently the NRA instructor certificate is just a piece of paper, a ticket punch if you will. Instructors should be required to demonstrate proficiency for any credibility.

Next, the NRA needs to build a library of safety videos and they should be given to new members when they join. Firearm safety, especially in the home needs to be a new member priority. Instead of giving new members a bag, pen or other shiny trinket, give them something that will help keep them and their family members' safe-knowledge.

Cultivating and growing stronger members will only strengthen their member and voter base. Putting the priority back on the shooter will also strengthen the organization.

Finally, they should buy land and invest in private ranges for the general membership. Land is a great investment for the organization. Further, if there is no land to shoot on in the future, then there are fewer shooters. Build quality training facilities on this land and open it up to memberships and law enforcement and military use as well. It will pay for itself. It will bring money to local economies.

It is a simple solution. Do the right thing for your membership and give back. Hold a higher standard and just don't solicit the dollar every time a crisis arises. Establishing an economic foothold in America's communities will have a positive ripple effect and build a stronger NRA.

NEW SHOOTERS CORNER

CLEANING AND LUBRICATION

Everyone has a “system” for cleaning weapons. In my day, you could not eat or shower until you cleaned your weapons. We developed many systems. Here is what I use today.

General Flush Out and Cleaning

I either flush with Carb Cleaner or squirt some Wipe Out in and let sit/scrub and then flush with carb cleaner. This will get most of the loose stuff out. I use Wipe Out in all my barrels and it seems to do a good job.

Lubrication

I use Wilson's Universal Lube for my load bearing surfaces and general coating of steel. Bill had automotive folks develop a lube that was similar to what they put on race car engines that sit on a shelf for eight months and not migrate. It is great stuff.

For lighter areas of lube to include Glock Internals, I use Tri-Flow. Locksmiths I know flush out locks with WD-40 and then use Tri-Flow to lubricate. It is light and seems to work well. I also use it to wipe out the insides of my magazines.

Guy at work said "I just can't figure out why I'm hitting so low"

As you shoot more, you should be able to recognize the problem minimal time. As an instructor I try and look at the weapon before I look at the shooter. You just never know....
